On the Intellectual Subject in Jean-Paul Sartre and the Masses with the People – how Marxists are always the Correct Subject, Identity and even Person

Introduction

By Etienne Balibar

Glad to know the Marxist-Leninist Sirohi, he is busy agitating in his creative fever and is always about insurrection and mass insurrection these days. He is also in a lot of joking and problems in it. I argue a philosopher is finally an intellectual subject and socializes and generalizes his problems to those of politics. We are politicians as we are Spinozans.

I meant by my works, just the process of masses and people and citizen subject as then party form of Communism and how then we are always a social ontology of a person, and how we are irrelevant in our dedication to a people as Rousseau would say.

I. In Gramsci's Organic Intellectual Capacity

I mean then that the organic intellectual expresses the question of identity and people and subjects perfectly. He argues – the capitalist system, and Taylorism then becomes Fordism and the problems of an individual is his personal problems which are all the personal problems he might have which is liberated by participating in the process of say working class trade unionism and learning from the people and this makes him realise he is just use-value freedom. A person is expressive, happy and perfect and cannot have any problems in life. I then call this Intellectual people in general.

II. Conceptual Object of this Process in Marxism, we are all Marxists even post-Marxists are finally Marxists and why

The moment one defends the people and the organised revolt of the masses as Ortega y Gasset would argue, one is Marxist. Marxism is the untranscendable horizon of our times, and that is because post-Marxism is a form of elaboration of the organic people, I mean we are people now, and a people, and even a will of a people, but we remain then Rousseau and Marx joined in our daily approach to the poor or Universal self-consciousness. Which just means we are social subjects as Althusser means in his process.
